

Wisconsin Forum on Rural and Urban Agriculture

hosted by Sustain Rural Wisconsin Network

What are the realities of Wisconsin farming today?

What are the public health implications of our agriculture and food systems?

What's the link between farm quality and food quality?

How do we make our voices heard?

Reception and Keynote: John Ikerd, “How Did We Get Here? Where Are We Going? Growing Together in Strength.”

Friday November 11, 2011 at 5:00 - 9:00 PM Memorial Union - Tripp Commons

Forum on Rural and Urban Agriculture

Saturday November 12, 2011 at 8:00 AM - 4:30 PM - Pyle Center

The first annual Wisconsin Forum on Rural and Urban Agriculture in Madison on November 11 and 12 brings together forward-thinking farmers, economists, environmentalists, health professionals, sportsmen, rural citizens and others concerned with the quality and safety of food, water and air in Wisconsin.

An outstanding line-up of experts will discuss the realities of Wisconsin farming today; the implications of our agriculture and food systems; and the need for sustainable and safe food systems in Wisconsin and beyond. The forum will unite participants around shared goals through information, participation and action.

Register for the forum at:
www.sustainruralwisconsin.net